

Two blacksmiths yesterday examined the hind shoes and hoofs of the horse at Police Headquarters. These two shoes were almost new and had the union marks of the farriers still on them. The two front shoes were old and had no such marks. One of the blacksmiths, whose name and address the police refused to divulge, after looking at the new hind shoes, said he was almost sure that he put them on about two days ago, referring particularly to the size, shape and markings.

Expert inspection showed, however, that the shoes had not been used more than two hours. It was assumed from this that the animal had not been employed for work, but was merely held in readiness for his last job of dragging the bomb wagon to the heart of the financial district.

Quest Leads to Staten Island

There is a tendency on the part of detectives to concentrate on Staten Island and Brooklyn for more definite information as to the owner of the death wagon. They believe that the wagon was seen coming up from the Wall Street ferry and that the H. S. I. U. (Horsehoe, International Union) makes on the shoes were most frequently used in Staten Island where horsehoes abound in fairly large numbers.

The identifying blacksmith was taken up to West Thirty-ninth Street, where the body of the horse was traced to a blacksmith shop. He was asked to identify it as the horse he shod. He said he did not know the horse, but he said he knew the blacksmith who shod it, and he said he would try to find out if it is the same horse he has in mind.

Mr. Lamb said that a piece of the wagon had been found on the ledge of a window on the twenty-fourth floor of the Bankers Trust Building. The fragment showed that the wagon was at least ten years old and probably was of the type used for small stores' delivery of such things as butter and eggs, because of its peculiar width. The harness, it was said, had been traced to a maker in Kingston, N. Y., but was so old that it had undoubtedly changed hands scores of times before it fell into the hands of its present owners.

Department of Justice officials knew nothing of the report that portions of the containers that had been used for storing gasoline and kerosene were found in the neighborhood of the explosion, which was taken to indicate that the perpetrators had intended to cause a general conflagration in connection with the detonation. Bits of these cans were in the possession of the police.

It was learned yesterday that three bundles which were taken to be stales of rags were seen between the bales of the wagon in front of the Sub-Treasury Building and the western end of the structure shortly after the blast. Several persons who came upon the scene shortly after the explosion were said to have used two of these bales as head rests for some of the injured. Police heads say that if the presence of these bales can be confirmed it would indicate they had been used to wrap the infernal machine as they were showered upon the neighborhood from the outside of the bomb, pointing out there were not enough of them to cover the entire surface of a bomb of the size this one is believed to have been. They feel the bales were part of the internal mechanism.

Flynn Clings to Red Theory

Chief Flynn, who is in charge of the federal investigation under the direction of Attorney General Palmer, was adamant that the "American Anarchist" theory was responsible for the disaster. That the same crowd who perpetrated the bomb outrages of June, 19, were also back of the present explosion, he said, could be seen from the similarity of circulars found last year of those placed in the mail box within a few minutes before noon on Thursday.

"We had solved the mysteries of last year's bombs," he remarked, "but were just starting in hunting the criminals to justice when Alfredo Salas, who was detaining in New York, jumped from the fourteenth story window of the Department of Justice office and committed suicide. That tipped our hand, and the crowd got safely out of the country before we could nab them."

"Now in this case we have much more to work upon at the start. The similarity of the circulars found last year and the present case is a direct challenge to all our knowledge of the gang who committed the outrages last year. Most of this information never has been made public, and it would not be wise to reveal it now. We have established the identity of one anarchist who was killed by his own bomb in last year's outrages with much less evidence than we have in the present case. Now we have whole circulars dropped into a mail box, presumably by the man who set off the bomb, half an hour after a letter carrier had emptied the box. In addition there are the horse and the broken bits of the wagon upon which the bomb was placed."

Two Men Sought by U. S.

From other sources it was learned that secret service operatives are looking particularly for Carlo Tresca, who for years had been prominently identified with certain anarchist groups. The man higher up among the anarchists for whom an alarm has also been sent out, is Guitman, a pupil of the famous anarchist Malatesta. These anarchists are organized in small groups of ten or fifteen men and had their headquarters at Lynn, Mass.

In this connection the authorities at Milwaukee are looking for a man there who is reported to have said: "Something will bust in the East this week that will open your eyes."

The authorities, however, will not proceed indiscriminately against radicals here because of the explosion was indicated by Superintendent Lamb. He said no arrests or raids were contemplated, because there was nothing definite yet to proceed upon.

Palmer Leaves Flynn in Charge

Attorney General Palmer left the city for Stroudsburg, Pa., at 6 o'clock in the afternoon, placing the Federal investigation in charge of Chief Flynn.

phase of the investigation entirely in the hands of Chief Flynn. The authorities, he said, may experience some difficulty in bringing Edward Fischer, who forewarned friends here of the explosion, from Hamilton, Ont., to this city. He understood that Fischer had retained counsel to fight extradition to the United States, but he pointed out that in view of the fact that Fischer had been detained at a sanitarium in this country some years ago as a mentally incompetent person, his deportation on the ground of lunacy will be asked.

The September grand jury will examine three witnesses to-morrow who say they saw a wagon of the du Pont firm in the neighborhood a short time before the disaster.

Dr. Otto H. Schultze, medical examiner for the District Attorney, after an examination of a number of the victims' bodies, said they all met death by stings and metal fragments which did not resemble parts of automobiles. There was no addition to the thirty-three so far reported dead. The seventeen-year-old boy also found among the victims has not yet been identified.

Crime Expert Says Powerful Band Is Back of Bomb Plot

Foster Declares Many Were Required to Prepare for Blast Here; Appeals to All Agencies to Hunt Gang

Declaring it to be his belief that the most powerful and daring band ever organized for the perpetration of bomb outrages is in existence and was responsible for the Wall Street blast, Captain Robert J. Foster, one of the country's foremost crime investigators, yesterday called upon all detective agencies to search and make independent investigation without retainer, of what he termed "the crime of the century."

"It took weeks and perhaps months of careful planning to carry out this terrorist demonstration," Captain Foster said. "The explosive unquestionably was carried bit by bit over long periods and was stored until a sufficient quantity had been hoarded to satisfy those pulling off the job."

"There is absolute proof, I believe, that the largest organization ever known for the perpetration of such a crime is in existence. It is a challenge to the brains of the United States Secret Service, the Department of Justice and the Police Department of New York City. It is a direct challenge to the city, state and national government."

Says Government Is Too Tolerant

Captain Foster, who was the chief investigator for the National Erectors' Association of the dynamite plots during the labor wars of 1910, 1911 and 1912, charged that the government had been too tolerant in its dealings with individuals who "have shown by their conduct and speeches and literature that they are against American institutions and government."

"Sedition has been openly preached on the streets of New York," he continued, "and the destruction of public property has been publicly advocated."

The investigator said he was convinced that the experts were correct in their contention that the bomb had exploded in the wagon, but there is no doubt in his mind that it was a time-clock bomb. He said that the terrorists would not use a fuse because of the danger of its odor attracting attention.

Believes Expert Supervised Plot

"In my judgment," he said, "three or more persons died in the transportation of the explosive, and there must have been an expert electrician or an A-I machinist supervising the plot. I believe it was brought from Long Island, chiefly because the bridges over the East River offer an easy approach to the financial district."

When Captain Foster was asked what he thought the bomb cost, he said the actual explosive in it was worth about $400, but that in point of time and work spent in making it an estimate of $6,000 would not be too high.

Amount and Location of Explosive and Hour Chosen Cited to Support Theory

From The Tribune's Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—The purpose of the explosion in the heart of the New York financial district was to kill rather than to destroy property, in the opinion of George S. Rice, chief mining engineer of the Bureau of Mines. Mr. Rice returned to Washington to-day after making an investigation of the explosion.

"Every indication is that the explosion was intentional and that the men who are responsible had a practical knowledge of explosives and their effect," said Mr. Rice.

"I do not think the intention of the perpetrators of the outrage was to destroy property. They did not use the explosive in sufficient quantity nor with the proper preparations for this purpose."

"From their use of scrap cast iron in connection with what I believe was dynamite, I am pretty sure their intention was destruction of human life, especially the force in the Morgan offices. If so, they certainly could not have planned better."

Military Funerals To-day for Soldier Victims of Blast

Eight War Veterans Among the Dead; Double Services To Be Held for Two Who Were Killed Together

Many of the funerals of the dead in the Wall Street bomb disaster are to be held to-day and to-morrow. Eight war veterans were among the victims of the explosion, and military honors are to be shown at the funeral of several of these men.

From Campbell's Funeral Church, Broadway and Sixty-sixth Street, there will be funeral services this afternoon for two of these veterans, William F. Hutchinson and Harold L. Gillies, who were standing at Broad and Wall streets when the explosion occurred. Hutchinson had been with the Equitable Life Assurance Society for twenty years. He was a Spanish war veteran and a member of the 7th Regiment. Gillies was junior member of the brokerage firm of George H. Burr & Co., 120 Broadway.

Reginald J. Ellworthy, a bomb victim, who died in the Broad Street Hospital Friday, will be buried in Rose-dale Cemetery, West Orange, this afternoon. The guard of honor at the funeral will be from B Company, 114th Infantry, 29th Division, with which he served in France. Ellworthy was employed by the Marine Insurance Company.

The funeral of T. Montgomery Osgrey, twenty-four years old, of 138 Chestnut Avenue, Flatbush, will be held to-morrow morning. Burial will be private. Osgrey's body was not identified until Friday. He served with the 27th Division on the Mexican border and in France. He was employed by Johnson & Wood, stock brokers, at 115 Broadway.

The body of Colonel Charles A. Neville, U. S. A., will be buried with full military honors at Washington. Colonel Neville served as a brigadier general overseas.

Franklin G. Miller, who died in the Broad Street Hospital, will be buried this afternoon from his home, 700 West 19th Street. He was a lieutenant in the naval air force during the war.

U. S. Groups Represented At Conference of Reds

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Representatives of political and labor groups in more than a score of countries attended the second conference of the Moscow Internationale, which opened at Moscow last month, according to advices received here to-day in official circles. Groups in the United States represented, the advices said, included the American Socialist party, Communist party and Communist Labor party.

Other countries from which representatives were present were Great Britain, France, Hungary, Germany, Austria, Poland, Sweden, Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania, Bulgaria, Turkey, India, Korea, China, Armenia, Persia, Egypt, Azerbaijan, Georgia and Afghanistan.

"Everything seems to point to the fact the explosion was the work of terrorists, who sought to create wholesale disaster. It should not be willing to swear to the fact that dynamite was the sole explosive. Further investigation may show that either picric acid or TNT was used. But whatever the explosive, I am pretty positive that the explosion of the users was about as have stated."

Wife Sues Race Tipster; Says Love Was Alienated

Monte F. Jacobs Tells of Losses, but Is Ordered to Pay $50 a Week Alimony

Supreme Court Justice Guy awarded $50 a week alimony to Effie Elizabeth Jacobs yesterday in her separation suit against Monte F. Jacobs. She said that her husband dealt in race track tips as the Teco Information Service, selling tips at $5 a day or $20 a week and having from twenty to sixty weekly subscribers; and at least five daily buyers on an average. His minimum income she figured at $550 a week.

In his reply Jacobs averred that the business was less profitable than his wife imagined and pretty uneven. His net income for the week ended April 2, he said, was $430, and in the succeeding week he suffered a loss of $195. From May to August, he said, his weekly losses averaged $45 and to offset them he became "cashier of an individual occupied in horse racing," a position he had to relinquish because of his wife's criticism of it.

Mrs. Jacobs asserted that her husband could eliminate one considerable item of his expenses if he would cease to invite May M. Croke, of 127 Ashford Street, Brooklyn, out to dinner. She is suing Miss Croke for alleged alienation of her husband's affection, demanding $100,000 as damages.

Routine of Morgan Banking House Not Altered by Blast

Bandaged Clerks and Scaffolding in Main Room Are Only Apparent Departures From Normal on Saturday

The normal Saturday quiet prevailed at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. yesterday. Not all the partners were down to business, and many of the employees had taken the full day off at the suggestion of the firm. A few employees, with heads or arms bandaged, offered about the only evidence of the explosion of Thursday, aside from the scaffolding set up in the center of the main banking floor to support the remains of the dome which was shattered by the blast.

The story that the Morgan firm is conducting an inquiry, with its own detectives working on the case, was denied. One of the officers of the banking house reiterated the statement made by one of the partners on Friday that the investigation is a public rather than a private matter.

"We are getting most of our information about the whole affair from the newspapers," said a spokesman for the Morgan firm.

Members of the firm late Friday visited the home of T. W. Joyce, one of the employees of Morgan & Co., who suffered personal injury and whose son, William Joyce, was killed by the blast as he sat at his desk in the rear of the Morgan offices. Mr. Joyce, it was said, was rapidly recovering from his injuries.

It is not expected that J. P. Morgan, head of the firm, who is in the north of Scotland on a hunting trip, will return before early December. The firm has been in communication with him, but it is not believed he will change his original plans.

Jury Inquiry On To-morrow Other Cases Will Not Interfere With Explosion Investigation

Afternoon sessions will be held by the September regular grand jury if necessary, in an effort to establish the cause and fix the blame for the Wall Street explosion. This was announced yesterday by Judge William M. Wadhams in the Court of General Sessions. Judge Wadhams said that he would instruct the District Attorney to divert to the additional grand jury cases scheduled for the regular grand jury. The session to-morrow will be taken up by the examination of three witnesses, who told of having seen in the neighborhood of Wall Street on the day of the explosion a wagon which they supposed to be the property of the du Pont Powder Company.

Search Police Search Vainly For Clues to Exchange Blast

GENOA, Sept. 18.—The police and carabinieri were engaged all last night in a searching investigation of yesterday's bomb explosion at the Stock Exchange here. Several suspects, including six Hungarian Communists, were arrested, but no definite clue has been found.

The explosion did some damage to the exchange, but caused no casualties.

Fischer May Have Got Mental Radio on Bomb, Says Expert

Head of Hyslop Institute Declares Similar Cases Have Been Known When Mind Was "Tuned" to Proper Pitch

Psychic knowledge of an impending disaster is as feasible as though it were a "pick up" by a radio operator whose instrument is tuned to the "tuned" or within receiving range of a wireless message, according to Dr. Walter F. Prince, acting director of the American Institute for Physical Research, founded by the late Professor James S. Hyslop.

Dr. Prince declared that the assertion of Edward R. Fischer, detained at Hamilton, Ont., that his postcard warnings to friends here of the Wall Street explosion last Thursday were inspired by psychic phenomena, "were highly within the realm of possibility."

Dr. Prince cited two striking cases, a train wreck and a woman's suicide, premonition of which, he said, he had received in dreams and which were borne out in detail the following day.

Dr. Prince said the mind of Fischer, whose brother-in-law, Robert A. Pope, declared he possessed psychic power for a number of years, evidently was "tuned" to those who plotted the explosion, receiving telepathic impressions of the tragedy that later occurred. He said the expressions or thoughts of conspirators thus could have been registered on the abnormal mind of Fischer.

It is not to be supposed that Fischer's mind, being "tuned" in harmony with the workings of the minds of those who planned the disaster, received the important fact that such an occurrence was to happen," he said, "but misread the signals as to the exact time, which accounted for the fact that his warnings were fixed the time of the disaster about twenty-four hours ahead of its actual happening."

"It is regarded as a proved fact by a large number of authentic instances known to me by personal inspection, or other good evidence, that there is such a thing as prediction of future events. I regard these instances as usually of the nature of supernatural reasoning. As the intention to commit the Wall Street crime was undoubtedly in the minds of some persons for days previous, it is conceivable that Fischer got his information by a quasi-auditory process, whether or not it was intended for him. It likewise is possible that he got it by telepathy from living minds."

Internes Are Commended For Aid to Bomb Victims

A citation for valorous work was conferred yesterday on the white-clad internes of New York's hospitals, who responded to the call for aid after the explosion, by Henry J. Fisher, chairman of the executive committee of the United Hospital Fund.

"Few people realize," Mr. Fisher said, "what these young doctors contribute to the relief of suffering humanity. After two or three years at college and four long years at medical school they serve approximately two years in our hospitals, mostly without a cent of remuneration."

Of the seven hospitals to which bomb victims were admitted, the interne figures are as follows:

Bellevue, 80 internes, pay $50 a month; Gouverneur, 12, no pay; New York, 18, no pay; Volunteer, 8, $20 a month; St. Vincent's, 16, no pay; Broad Street, 7, $50 a month; Post-Graduate, 23, no pay.

"These hospitals offered the public the services of 162 young doctors," Mr. Fisher said, "and the immediate and splendid response should not be forgotten as long as this catastrophe is recalled."

In reply to a cable message sent by W. Remick, cabled its appreciation, adding that "nothing but slight scratches occurred to any of our members or employees."
